FRIDAY, APRIL 9, 1819.

CORRESPONDENCE,

Between Major General Jackson, and Brevet Major General Scott, on the subject of an order, bearing date the 22d April, 1817; published by the former, to the troops of his division, and printed about the same time, in most of the public papers.

This correspondence is offered in manuscript under the following circumstances:—

On the 21st Feb. 1818, the war department issued in orders, a regulation in these words,—"all publications relative to transactions between officers of a private and personal nature, are prohibited. Any newspaper publication or hand bill, of such a character, will be cause for the arrest of an officer and the foundation of charge against him. It is made the duty of all officers, having the power to arrest and prefer evidence for charge on such publication, and whenever such charge is prefered, one specification of which, will be the violation of this regulation, the proper authority will bring the officer to a trial before a general court martial."

Up to this moment, General Scott has not violated this regulation either in its letter or spirit. Indeed he had no inclination to obtrude on the public, his difference with General Jackson, until the latter had, particularly during his recent tour between Nashville and New-York, widely circulated garbled* manuscript copies of the correspondence, and caused allusions to be made to it in certain public papers in a similar spirit of malevolence and misrepresentation.

These facts having come to the knowledge of General Scott, he, on the 22d ultimo, called the attention of the secretary of war to the above regulation; not for the purpose of invoking the aid of the government, but to ask for permission to defend himself, by a fair publication, in a pamphlet form, as that mode seemed to stand precisely on the same ground with a publication in manuscript—neither being expressly prohibited.

The secretary said, in reply, that the department was not in possession of evidence to the fact of the violation of its regulation, and even if such evidence were furnished, that would rather be a reason for enforcing the penalty against the guilty than a motive for relaxation in respect to the other party.

Without deciding in his own mind whether this could or would be done, in respect to General Jackson, Gen. Scott on the 8th instant furnished the Secretary with the most unequivocal evidence of the garbled publication before asserted; leaving it to him, as the conservator of the discipline of the army, to say whether his regulation was violated or not and to act or acquiesce as he might think proper. But feeling at the same time, that whatever might be the result of his controversy with Gen. Jackson, a vindication of his character before the public, was a preliminary step of the first necessity.—General Scott in the same letter submitted for the consideration of the proper authority the following points:—

1st. Seeing that the regulation in question had not received the sanction of congress, to which body the right is given "to make rules for the government, and regulation of the land and naval forces," (1st section 8th article Constitution) and according to the practice, in such cases, General Scott suggested that perhaps it might be recalled.

2nd. Supposing the regulation to be valid, without such sanction, it was asked whether a publication in a pamphlet form, like a publication in manuscript, might not be considered, a casus omissus, and therefore innocent:

3d. If it were decided, that both those modes of publication were prohibited, Gen. Scott desired that it might be particularly observed, that the regulation was in the hands of Gen. Jackson, at once an instrument of offence and defence.

It seems, nevertheless, that the regulation is not to be recalled, and that Gen. Jackson will not be selected as the pivot on which to try the question, whether a manuscript publication be a violation of the regulation or not. As the weaker party in the controversy, both before the government and the country, Gen. Scott has no disposition to come to trial on the other point touching the pamphlet; although the principles governing the two cases appear to be precisely the same. It is enough that he admits, that "Laws are made for the weak, and not the strong," without wishing the public should have before it, at the same time, and at his expense, two living and concurrent illustrations of the truths contained in that aphthegm.

General Scott, therefore, has no mode left him to counteract the machinations he complains of, or to vindicate his character, except by shielding himself under the precedent set by his opponent, in respect to the form of publication; and in this form the public shall have the entire correspondence.

But here again, General Scott labours under a great disadvantage, in comparison with his opponent. He has not a numerous Staff to copy, to certify and circulate the correspondence. He in the discharge of the laborious duty confided to him, happens at this moment, not to have an aid-de-camp with him. His occupations do not permit him to cry his papers through the principal cities of the Union, nor can he have recourse to any person about him for the convenient frank to relieve his pocket from the charge of postage. Labouring under these disadvantages, under fatigue and indisposition, he makes this appeal to the public, and begs that the few friends to whom he may have it in his power to send copies, will give them the widest circulation—Some other persons will be furnished in due time.

Richmond (Va.) March 18th, 1819.

ORIGIN OF THE CORRESPONDENCE.

General Scott first saw, at his quarters, in New York, about the last of May, 1817, the the celebrated order. He read it in haste, and does not recollect to have made any particular remark on it at that time.

About the 9th of June following, General Scott went to dine at a private house, where he met a highly respectable family and company, and among the guests, the governor elect, of the state. By this time, the order had been printed in all the city papers, and was, as will be remembered, the leading topic every where. It soon became the subject of conversation (before dinner) between the governor and General Scott, who were seated near each other. The governor thought the order mutinous, and general Scott felt himself called upon, by the turn of conversation if not expressly invited (which, is his belief) to state, professionally, what were the principles involved in the question raised by general Jackson with the war Department or President.

His opinion and his illustrations, or in other words, what was said by him at the time and on two other occasions, (the one before, the other after the 14th of August,) will be found in substance, and almost litterally, in the second letter of the series. This conversation was, no doubt, partially over-heard by one or two other guests, though conducted in the ordinary tone, and not obtruded on the company.

The other conversation prior to the 14th of Aug. (the date of the anonymous letter,) was with three gentlemen, whose characters and pursuits, make it quite impossible to suspect either of them, of being general Jackson's anonymous correspondent.

LETTER I.

GEN. JACKSON TO GEN. SCOTT.

Head Quarters, Division of the South, Nashville, Sept. 8th, 1817.

SIR,

With that candour due the character you have sustained as a soldier and as a man of honor—and with the frankness of the latter I address you.

Enclosed is a copy of an anonymous letter, post marked, New-York, 14th Aug. 1817, together with a publication taken from the Columbian, which accompanied the letter. I have not permitted myself for a moment to believe, that the conduct ascribed to you is correct. Candour, however induces me to lay them before you, that you may have it in your power to say how far they be incorrectly stated.

If my order has been the subject of your animadversions, it is believed you will at once admit it, and the extent to which you may have gone.

I am Sir, respectfully,
Your most obedient servant,
Signed—AND'W JACKSON.

GEN. W. Scott, United States' Army.

Anonymous letter addressed to Major Gen. Andrew Jackson, Post marked, "N. York, Aug. 14," and received the 3d September, 1817, (enclosed in the foregoing.)

"Your late order has been the subject of much private, and some public remark. The war office gentry and their adherents pensioners and expectants, have all been busy: but no one (of sufficient mark for your notice) more than major general Scott, who, I am credibly informed goes so far as to call the order in question, an act of mutiny. In this district he is the organ of government insinuations, and the supposed author of the paper enclosed—which, however, (the better to cover him) was not published until he had left this city for the lakes. Be on your guard, as they have placed spies upon Brown here—so it is probable you are not without them.—The Eastern federalists having now all become good republicans, and pledged to the support of the President, as he to them, government can now do well without the aid of Tennessee, &c. &c. A word to the wise is enough."—The enclosed is taken from the Columbian, a paper of much circulation in this state, New York.—Certified and (signed) J. M Glassell, Aid-de-Camp."

The following article was enclosed in the foregoing letters:

"Gen. Jackson's doctrines of obedience, Queries to the Editor of ———, and other learned casuists. I. Suppose the government of the United States give orders to a general officer, or delicately signify their wishes and intentions, to remove from a certain command, one o the generals' proteges and favorites? These orders or intentions of government, are not pleasing to either the chief or his subordinate. They, therefore employ their joint faculties of manœuvring to frustrate the object of government. By artifices, evasions, and pretended misapprehensions of meaning, they have so far prevailed as to hold a command in defiance of government itself, for nearly a year.

Does not this case prove, that government when restricted, according to the dictorial system of general Jackson, may not only be tricked and insulted, but absolutely nullified? What redress would an interested court martial afford?

2. Suppose that through the same general, positive orders were given, by government for another officer to supercede his protege and favorite in the command of his usurped place. Suppose these positive orders, as they were not susceptible of quibble or subterfuge, be pocketed, laid aside, delayed, and not executed, for more months than it would be necessary to employ days or hours—would this case prove the utility of government relying for the execution of its orders solely on the integrity of a commander? Perhaps it may be alleged that such cases are purely imaginary; let facts which have occurred in less than a year be examined, and it will then be known whether they vary in any respect, from the cases as above stated.

A QUERIST.

"Certified [and signed] J. M. Glassell, Aid-de-Camp."

NOTES.

War Office gentry, &c.—If the writer meant to class gen. Scott among them, he was totally mistaken. The acting secretary of war, between the summer of 1816, and December 1817, was the chief clerk of the department—a very worthy and highly respectable private gentleman, but previously unknown as a public character, and, therefore, in the opinion of gen. Scott, (as was frequently expressed by him at the time) an unfit person to preside over the army, or to represent it, before the congress or the country. It is due to this gentleman to add, that whilst in the department he conducted himself with great modesty and propriety.—Gen. Scott had nothing to expect or to ask from the department, except what the law and his rank entitled him to.

In this district, he is the Organ, &c.—This is utterly false, General Scott has never since the war, taken part either in general or local politics. He held no correspondence with the executive departments of the government, except on professional matters, and none with the president—and can almost say with certainty, that he never once had a conversation with a resident of New-York, on the politics of the state, except with one or two friends of the army, the particular admirers of Mr. Clinton.

They have placed Spies upon Brown here &c. &c.—Gen. Brown and Scott were, and are on terms of friendship and intimacy.—He has read this correspondence (in Jan. 1818) and frankly acknowledged that General Jackson had sent him a copy of the anonymous letter, to put him on his guard against Gen. Scott. The latter, jestingly remarked to Gen. Brown, that if a spy had been placed on him, the president was the person—for at the time the anonymous letter was written, the two were making a tour around the north west frontier and on terms of much mutual respect and good will. Gen. Scott, has reason to believe, moreover, that, Gen. Brown is well pleased with Mr. Monroe, as president, and the latter with gen. Brown as the commander of the army. This is to the honor of both, for gen. Brown is known to be a decided Clintonian.

The Eastern Federalists, &c.—Here we discover the hand of a master. Never was gudgeon seized with more avidity! "A word to the wise is enough." The bait was swallowed, and gen. Jackson has put his character for wisdom beyond all controversy. "De Witt Clinton, our next president." has since been, it is said, his standing toast. But let us recall to mind, some of the political events of that day; Mr. Clinton had just been elected governor, and an election was then going on in Pennsylvania, from which, he was supposed to entertain hopes of the most favorable results. Had his friends succeeded in electing general Heister, republican Tennessee and general Jackson would have constituted a handsome addition to the nucleus of opposition. It is impossible, therefore, not to perceive that a Clintonian must have been the anonymous writer. Gen. Scott repeats, that he has been but a passive observer of those events; not that he had not all the rights of any other citizen in regard to such questions, but because respect for himself (under his relation with the president, as commander and commanded) induced him to waive those rights.

*Extract of a letter dated at New-York, March 2d, 1819, written by a gentleman of honor and intelligence.

"General Jackson during his late visit to this place, was at some trouble to cause to be widely distributed, his correspondence with you. He left with a gentleman (late a lieutenant colonel of the army) a copy, nay of the anonymous letter, his letter to you, your reply and his rejoinder, all certified by his Aid de Camp". The reader will perceive, that the 4th letter of the series was omitted. General Scott has other evidence of unfairness practised at other places.

ALEXANDRIA:
FRIDAY, APRIL 9, 1819.

When bodily strength, and, in the exercise of it, a disregard of all impediments moral and religious, (such as remorse, and the fear of God's vengeance) carried with them the highest advantages, and were the direct stepping-stones to wealth, power, rank, and even empire itself, then was the reputation for fighting ferociously and fearlessly, a reasonable and natural object of ambition. At that time, when, to borrow the thought of an historian, speaking of the elevation of Maximin from the condition of a foreign slave to the imperial throne of Rome, "he who could carry the heaviest armor, and give the heaviest blows, was most likely to rise to dominion over the rest of his fellow citizens"—then indeed was it an ambition sufficiently natural to aim at running in the ring of prize fighters, bullies, bravadoes and ruffians;—but now, when not only the ascendancy of mere ruffian strength no longer exist, but the laws of God and man, feeling, justice, humanity—all the compunctious visitings of our nature are avowedly against it, to give harbor to such dispositions in the bosom, is such a perversion of reason, honor and honesty, as no sophistry can justify. For an offence too slight to draw one penny damages from a jury, and for which an action would be hissed out of any court of law or justice in Christendom, a black hearted man, with hellish premeditation, takes the life of a fellow creature; and, in doing so, consigns a whole family—perhaps superannuated parents, whose dependence was on the industry of their murdered child—a lovely wife, and her innocent babes—to want and all the evils incident to it—to unprotected childhood—to a youth destitute of guidance and protection, and to a manhood arising out of it in moral ruin and premature decay. And all for what?—Why to shine infamously brilliant in a quality in which, as I have heretofore shown, he is equalled by ninety-nine in every hundred of civilized men, and quite out-rivalled by the most profligate and low in society;—by gamblers, highwaymen, housebreakers—"alley-lurking, nose-slitting villains"—the dregs of creation. Does it never occur to them, in some lucid moment, that whatever they may think, or may hear in the circles of contamination, where they imbibe their brandy and their principles, that they are regarded with contempt and abhorrence by all who have the smallest pretensions to wisdom or to virtue—and that they walk upon the earth, under an irremoveable load of reproach and unexecuted condemnation—culprits not acquitted, but connived at; and moving on, with rapid strides, to a sentence infinitely worse than that which they have escaped.

Let me be understood! I would not apply this to those unfortunate persons who are dragged, with the burning yoke of public error searing their necks, to the field of murder, and who, by one kind of cowardice endeavor, at the risk of their lives, and with the total sacrifice of their consciences, to evade the imputation of another.—I do not mean a hint to any particular case—but at the savage practice in general—I aim not at any past, but at the prevention of future offences. I know that the blood of human beings has been shed for complaints such as a generous, well born and well bred boy of eight or ten years of age would be ashamed to run to his mother with.

Yet I doubt whether the criminality of those who, under such incitements, murder their fellow creatures, is more culpable than the cold stupid defence which often we hear set up for it. If you talk of the necessity of making a law to bring some of those murderers to legal punishment—what is the answer? "There are laws, but public opinion shields the aggressor:—it is the custom:—and the man who is determined not to murder by duel, is held infamous, and a recreant apostate from honour."

God forbid this were so. For if it were, then would the United States present the most lamentable national spectacle imaginable. A government, the execution of whose criminal laws depended on individual caprice—statutes enforcing the payment of taxes, but in the protection of life a dead letter—juries returning verdicts upon oath, not by facts proved, but by vicious fancies of their own, assumed for law, at the instigation of a profligate fashion—and in the place of a beneficent criminal code—(beneficent because alike certain and inevitable in protecting life against violation, and severe in punishing the murderer,) a savage code set up under the imposing guise of public opinion, while it is but a cheat which public opinion in reality reprobated because set up by beaus, bullies, coxcombs, gamblers and other robbers, who for the annoyance of mankind and the protection of their own lives from just laws, have broken into the old herald's office, and stolen the seal of honour, to affix it to their own demoniacal acts.

And what is this mighty power to which those brave duellists bend their neck in submission, while they dare fly in the face of the laws? Why, a fashion, truly.—It is related by an ancient historian,* that the Ethiopian happening, once, to have a prince with only one eye and bandy legs, took those precious deformities up as a fashion. Such a person would have made but an odd figure, if not kept in countenance: his court and subjects therefore, acted like men of honour, and, disdaining to be better furnished than their prince, closed up one eye and got crooked boots to distort their limbs in—and an Ethiopian, while the fashion lasted, would be as much ashamed to have two eyes, or strait legs, as an American shop-boy would be to be suspected of refusing a duel.

It is astonishing how prone we republicans are, without knowing why, to snap up the fashions of those whom we jeer as legitimates—as if there was something in legitimacy, after all, that had a secret attraction for us. It would be well if we considered that of kings we can imitate little by the vices—munificence and the virtues of that class which belong to power and dominion being out of our reach. And yet what bloody work will not two prentice-boys, clerks, or tinkers make out of a flat contradiction. Little do they know, all the while, (poor things, how should they?) that the emperor Charles the 5th was the original author of that fashion. Some of his courtiers happened to hear him say that no gentleman would take the lie. Those told it to the ladies—the ladies told it to their sparks—the sparks told it to their valets, or, if they had none, to the waiters at the taverns, and the hostlers at the inns, who, in order to be in fashion, fell cuffing one another—the infection circulated, and the lie was for the first time deemed a mortal affront. Thus a Spanish rhodomontade, because dropt from the mouth of a monarch, has at length descended upon us, "with a thousand trenched gashes on its head to push us from our seats."

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in Dumfries, to the editor of this Gazette.

"Dumfries, Tuesday, April 27.

"Re-election for this congressional district commenced here yesterday. At the close of the pole, the votes stood thus:

For C. F. Mercer, the congressional candidate,	135
For Bernard Hooe, jun.	136
For Mr. Fox.	131
For J. W. Tyler,	94
For. J. Hord,	62

"The four last being candidates for the house of Delegates, Messrs. Hooe and Fox are elected.

"Mr. Mercer having no opponent, his election also may be considered as certain.

"At the same time a pole was opened to supply a seat in the senate for the district of Prince William and Fairfax, lately represented by Mr. John Love. Of the votes taken, Mr. John Minton received 117, and Mr. R. Foster 101. Fairfax having yet to vote, the election of either of these gentlemen is doubtful.

"For the first time, since the establishment of the federal government, a congressional election has occurred in this district without a competition; and the candidate just returned for the house of delegates, from the most democratic county of the district, is a federalist.

"In this manifestation of the rapid decline of party animosity, all good men must find cause for rejoicing."

A REMARKABLE INSTANCE OF LONGEVITY.

Died,—On the 15th of March, Wonder, a negro man belonging to George Booker, of Prince Edward county. From an old record in the family, it appears that he was born in April, 1693; and the cause of his being named Wonder, was that his mother was in her 58th year when he was born.—He was strictly honest; had great strength of body, and a mind far superior to the people of his colour generally, which he retained in a surprising degree; he labored without compulsion, and it is not more than 8 or 10 years ago since he was a constant laborer in the garden of his master, without being required: he was a constant attendant on religious worship; and it is believed he exchanged a long life of servitude for one of everlasting bliss. Gunston for Sale.

THIS elegant estate is situated on the Potomac, 16 miles below Alexandria—it is bounded on three sides by the Potomac and Pohick creek, and contains nearly 3,000 acres of land, level and fertile, to which are attached six shad and herring fisheries, two of which command the river channel. This land will be laid off in four tracts, so as to have one or more fisheries to each; these tracts will be again divided if requisite. This estate is level and beautifully situated, very fertile, and remarkably healthy. Plaister acts with an effect equal to that of any part of Virginia or Pennsylvania.—I have used 500 bushels in twelve months, and such is its beneficial operation, that were I to keep this land I should considerably increase the quantity. A manufacturing mill is distant about two miles, on a stream navigable for vessels carrying 1200 bushels of wheat, where the Baltimore and Dist. of Columbia prices are given for grain: being bounded on 3 sides by water, a small extent only of fence is necessary to inclose the whole: it would be admirably adapted to grazing. The improvements are a large and very substantial brick mansion, 40 by 70 feet, with every necessary outhouse, three commodious barns, houses for Negroes, and fish houses at each of the fisheries. 120,000 bricks and 1000 bushels of lime are just burnt on the premises. There is a considerable extent of live fence, both useful and ornamental, two orchards of well selected apples and peach, besides an abundance of other choice fruit. More than 150 acres are in clover, 200 in corn, and land is in preparation for sowing 250 bushels of small grain. Any quantity of hay can be cut from the low grounds, some of which (and all might,) have been reclaimed at a trifling expense. The river and creeks, abound with wild fowl, particularly canvass backs; the woods with deer and a variety of other game. Mules, cattle, highly improved sheep, farming utensils and household furniture can be had. The terms of sale will be accommodating. Property in any of the cities, negroes, bank stock, western lands, or lands near the Ridge, will be taken in payment.—Letters must be addressed to me at Pohick Church, Fairfax county, Virginia.

September 4 GEORGE MASON.

Valuable Property for Sale.

THE subscriber is desirous of selling a handsomely situated farm, on Hunting creek, in Fairfax county Virginia, adjoining the Mount Vernon estate and the lands of general Thomson Mason, four miles from Alexandria, containing about 240 acres, 80 of which are in wood—40 to 50 in thriving meadow of clover and timothy—part of the residue recently seeded with wheat and rye, and clover, last spring—the whole enclosed with a new post and rail fence.—The improvements are, a comfortable and convenient frame dwelling house and kitchen, smoke house, poultry house, granary and stables.—There is on this place a rich and productive garden, and a large body of marsh meadow, from which may be saved annually 100 tons of hay, nearly as nutricious as the best timothy or clover.—With the farm would be sold a number of very valuable horses, cows and sheep; waggon, carts, and a variety of farming utensils and household and kitchen furniture; corn, oats and rye, and 40 tons hay. Also, adjoining the one above described, a farm containing 160 acres, recently enclosed, on which is a brick house, which a trifling expense would render comfortable. The soil is excellent, and a considerable part might be easily converted into meadow.—it would be sold with the other or separately. Also, a number of valuable servants, male and female. To prevent unnecessary application, he would observe, that they will only be sold to persons residing in the District or its vicinity, and not to be carried from it. The subscriber will also sell the greater part of his household furniture, which is new and handsome. For terms of all or any part of the above property, apply to NOBLET HERBERT, esq. or
